SEATON ROSS KEEPS ITS TRADITIONSGenerous Support For Old People's Entertainment

In these days, when so many of our rural customs are disappearing, it is pleasing to find a village where efforts are being made to preserve the old traditions.

One village where old customs die hard is Seaton Ross.

Here a lively committee endeavours each year to maintain the prestige of its time-honoured village feast, which has outlived its counterparts in the neighbouring district.

Another tradition of this village is the 80-year-old practice of Christmas carol

The committee, which consists of Mr. D. Beck (chairman), Mr. C. Preston (secretary), Mr. W. Preston (treasurer), Mrs. C. Preston, Mr. and Mrs. G. Blackburn, Mrs. Pickering, Mrs. R. Baxter, Miss Howden, Misses D. and P. Hessell, H. Preston, R. Moore and T. and F. Gardham, is not an unwieldy one, but they do their job very efficiently.

ACTIVE SOCIETY

One of our most active local Agricultural Discussion Societies is that of Melburne and district, which has a strong membership.

The other day about 30 of its members took advantage of a visit to Durham County, where they visited the Milk Marketing Board's artificial insemination station near Durham and later visited Mr. Gladstone's farm at Homeside Home Farm, Burnhope.

Lunch was provided at Chester-le-Street and the party later visited the farm of Mr. Tweddle at The Grove, Winlaon, Blaydon-on-Tyne. The outing was both enjoyable and interesting, apart from its instructional value.

SCOUTS' CAMP

The week-end camp at Givendale conducted by Mr. L. C. Sands (District Commissioner) for Patrol Leaders of the district revealed a distinct improvement in the work done by these lads.

Apart from hints they may receive on leadership, the general discussions provide good information which they can take back to their patrols.

The Pocklington district's summer programme will provide quite a number of activities.

For instance, the campcraft competition which will take place in July will be of a more

Everingham

The wedding took place at Everingham Church of Miss Norma Isabel Lund, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Lund, of Ellerker House, Everingham, and Mr. Alan Turton, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Turton, of Baulker Farm, Everingham.

Given away by her father, the bride wore a gown of cream satin brocade, and veil. She carried a shower bouquet of crimson carnations and stephanotis.

There were five bridesmaids, Miss Doreen Stonehewer and Miss Celia Turton wore blue spotted taffeta with net over-dress, with halo head-dresses of the same colour, trimmed with petunia velvet ribbon. The Misses Penny and Sallie White, and Susan Steel, wore blue spotted taffeta period dresses, with net haloes.

The two elder bridesmaids carried bouquets of sweet peas, and the three little girls Victorian posies of scabious and delphiniums.

Mr. George Dennison was best man, and the ushers at the church were Mr. E. White and Mr. R. Robinson.

Mr. J. W. Taylor was at the organ, and the Rev. T. G. Horwood officiated.

The reception was held at Ellerker House, Everingham, where 80 guests were entertained. Afterwards Mr. and Mrs. A. Turton left by car for Tenby, South Wales.

singing, the proceeds of which are devoted to providing an Eastertide entertainment and treat for the villagers.

These carol singing parties have done their rounds without a break for the past 80 years, and it is to some extent through them that I write my story this week.

It was on the conclusion of their carolling rounds three Christmas Eves ago that they were invited to the house of Mr. D. Beck, of the Blacksmith's Arms, a newcomer to the village at that time.

The suggestion of an old folks' treat was put forward by him and it was decided to take steps to bring it into being. A committee was formed and the event was inaugurated. It was the third annual party I was invited to attend last Friday night.

SENT TO THEIR HOMES

And what a party it was, too full of enjoyment and fun for the old people.

About 50 of them had been invited and some 30 gathered in a really cheerful atmosphere. Those who could not attend had their tea taken to their homes.

The women of the committee had excelled in providing such a splendid repast and through the forethought of Mr. D. Beck and Mr. T. Gardham a "drop of Scotch" had been provided for those who desired it.

Tea was followed by competitions and games in which the old people were active participants, especially the "Have a Go" quiz, conducted by Miss Howden and Mr. W. Preston, for which 2s. 6d. postal orders were awarded to those who knew the answers.

Later in the evening Pocklington Male Voice Choir presented a first-class musical programme concluding an enjoyable night in which nothing had been forgotten—even down to the tobacco, cigarettes and sweets.

Such efforts to bring enjoyment into the lives of old people are to be commended, and the Seaton Ross Old Folks Committee are deserving of every encouragement and support from the residents.

In this direction I was pleased to hear that the villagers support the fund very generously, for the money is raised by local social efforts only, with the exception of a collection box at the Blacksmith's Arms.

Concerts have been given at Everingham, Sutton-on-Derwent and Seaton Ross, by members of Seaton Ross Ladies' Cricket Club. It is hoped that the lead given by Seaton Ross will encourage other villages to follow suit and thus bring about a revival of women's cricket in the district. Seaton Ross have built up a good financial standing by social functions. Captain of the team is Mrs. G. Blackburn and the first game is fixed for June 3.

Picking the Prize-winners

Some pointers on selecting and preparing vegetables for exhibition

SELECT onions with unbroken, ripe skins and gracefully tapering, shapely necks.

Cut off the root at the bottom and rub the root plate smooth with emery or sand-paper. Cut off the stem 2 ins. above the bulb top, turn over the stub and tie neatly with moist raffia.

If a little Vaseline is smeared on the skins and rubbed gently the skins will shine.

POTATOES are not judged by size and weight, unless the competition is specifically a size and weight one.

In the general classes, however, you should put up medium-sized tubers with shallow eyes, a clean skin and in every way typical of the variety they represent.

Wash the tubers in warm water as soon as they are lifted from the ground.

PRIZE-WINNING qualities in carrots and parsnips consist of long meaty roots with broad shoulders, clean skins and good colour.

Wash carefully in warm water, using a sponge, rinse them clean and smear and rub with Vaseline.

If the regulations permit, show carrots and parsnips with their leaves on.

THE ideal in the summer cauliflower class is to put up heads having closely set, snow-

Don't, however, sacrifice quality to size. Trim back the circle of leaves so that the judge can see the head clearly.

If there are any green bracts peeping through the curds, don't snip these off. Any judge who knows his job will disqualify you in a trice if you do that.

PRIZEWINNERS in the green and red cabbage classes must have bullet-like heads. Closeness of leaf fold is the first consideration and comes before size.

CUCUMBERS must be straight, green, have no swelling about the handle or stem, and be succulent enough to allow you easily to push your thumbnail through the skin.

THE thumbnail test applies to marrows also, and of course it means that very big fruit is left without any ticket on it at all unless the class is for size and weight, which is not so common these days.

TOMATOES should be of medium size and good shape. The sample should be even and clearly coloured, and every fruit shown with the calyx and strig or footstalk attached.

Destroying Nettles.—To get rid of the nettles, fork up the roots as far as possible, and then dress the ground with an excess dose of sulphate of ammonia, 2ozs. per square yard, A. T. (3010, Beds). This will scald out any young growths which may remain and will afterwards benefit the grass.

DEDICATION OF SEATON ROSS ORGAN.

The new pipe organ in St. Edmund's Church, Seaton Ross, will be dedicated by the Rev. W. L. Shepherd, M.A., our Rural Dean, on Thursday, Sept. 2nd, at 7.15 p.m. Miss J. L. Shepherd, A.R.C.M., will preside at the organ and will also give an organ recital.

Seaton Ross is most fortunate in being in a position to purchase a new organ. This is owing to the generosity of the late Miss Edith Braithwaite and Mr. Albert James Barrow, who left legacies to St. Edmund's Church.

Trouble Behind an Unthrifty Look in Pigs

Worms can, and must, be countered

THREE kinds of worm infest the pig and it can be safely said that worm-infestation causes more unthriftness than any other trouble.

The large roundworm is picked up when the pig swallows the eggs in food and water. These eggs hatch out in the intestines, passing to the liver, via the bloodstream to the lungs, and back again to the liver.

Unmistakable Signs

Pigs infested by this type of worm may vomit and show signs of anaemia, emaciation or jaundice. Coughing or "thumps" is fairly frequent.

Treatment is to dose the pig with 5 per cent. oil of chenopodium and 95 per cent. castor oil. After fasting for 24 hours, a 30 lb. pig should be given 1 tablespoonful; 30-40 lb., 2 tablespoonsfuls; and over 40 lb., 3 tablespoonsfuls.

Carbon tetrachloride, in capsule form, and santonin are also satisfactory.

Stomach worms can be dealt with by dosing the pig with a solution of 1½ per cent. iodine in liquid paraffin. Lung worms do not respond to treatment, but infestation can be prevented by providing concrete piggeries, thus excluding the earthworm which forms an essential part of the life-cycle.

During the 24 hours after dosing, worms are usually passed in the excreta and this should be shovelled up and burned or the worms may again be swallowed by the pig.

Oil of chenopodium and santonin can be obtained from most large manufacturing chemists or veterinary chemists' shops.

"Sick land"—land that has been stocked with pigs for some time and is heavily worm-ridden—should be avoided, whilst breeding sows, which are commonly turned out to graze on grassland, should be wormed just before farrowing and washed and scrubbed before being put in a scrupulously-clean farrowing pen.

Days Of Selby Toll Bridge Numbered

IT would seem that the days of Selby Toll Bridge are numbered. For 157 years it has been in existence, and during that time has performed a great public service in providing easy passage between the East and West Ridings. The bridge is owned by the Company of Proprietors of Selby Toll Bridge.

It was in the year of the outbreak of the French Revolution, 1789—that serious discussion of the building of the bridge began. At that time, Selby was an important rendezvous for merchants, and it was felt that it would be a great convenience to them, if, instead of risking the hazards of the 700-year-old ferry, they could cross over the river by a bridge. Statistics also showed that a bridge would facilitate trade between the two Ridings, for in one month, 8,743 persons on foot, 3,052 with asses, 127 oxen, 66 hogs, 2,248 sheep, one coach, 15 chaises, 36 wagons and 16 carts passed over the ferry. The noblemen of that time, therefore, called in an engineer by the name of Jessop, whose report was favourable, and application was made to Parliament for the necessary powers to carry out the scheme. But it was not to be as easy as that, for, when the fact became known to the Corporation of York, who were the conservators of the Ouse, and some owners of the land adjoining the river, they expressed their intention of opposing the project in Parliament.

REFEREES DECIDE

Eventually, however, an agreement was entered into by the committees in London promoting and opposing the erection of the bridge, whereby three impartial referees should view the country, rivers, bridges, ferries and roads, to ascertain the public benefit to be derived from the proposed bridge.

The referees performed their task and unanimously agreed that the bridge would be a great benefit to the public.

They recommended that the bridge should be erected at the site of the ferry, and that it should be made of wood, that the swinging leaf should not be less than 30ft., that the piles should not take up more than one-twentieth of the area of water under the bridge; that stones should not be placed at the foot of the piles so as to raise the floor of the river any higher than it was then, and that the bridge should be 20ft. wide.

FARTHEST UP RIVER

As an additional recommendation to Parliament, it was pointed out that there was no other bridge over the Ouse below the one at York which was the farthest from the sea of any in England, being 100 miles up river.

The necessary powers were at last granted by Parliament and the erection of the present bridge was begun 50 yards further up the river than the ferry, in 1791, and completed in 1792.

The bridge soon justified its erection by the increase in the prosperity of Selby, and the navigation of the river was not impeded because of the bridge's swinging leaf, which allowed even the biggest river freighters to pass through.

Now it has been announced that a temporary free bridge is to be built so that a new permanent bridge which will be toll-free may be built on the present site.

FOOD OFFICER FOUND EXTRA MEAT IN SHOP

SUMMONED under Ministry of Food regulations, Frederick Layton, farmer, Everingham, near Howden, was fined £10 at Goole for failing to give notice within 24 hours of the slaughter of two sheep. Arthur Laverack, butcher, Holme-on-Spalding-Moor, was also ordered to pay £10 for aiding and abetting.

Mr R. E. Taylor, Goole, said a farmer was permitted to slaughter any animals which became casualties through sickness or accident, but he must send in the carcasses to the nearest collecting centre or notify the district chairman of auctioneers within 24 hours.

I DID NOT KNOW

Laverack and his assistant slaughtered two sheep for Layton. When Div.-Insp. Nelson, of the MOF, visited Laverack's shop on November 11, Laverack was asked if he had reported the slaughter to the district chairman of auctioneers. He replied, "No, I did not know I had to report it."

The inspector pointed out that part of one of the carcasses was missing, and Laverack said his assistant had made it up into sausages by mistake.

Layton was asked if he had reported the matter, and he replied, "No, I leave that to the man who does the killing."

Both men pleaded not guilty. Laverack said that on the day the inspector visited his shop he had to go to the Goole centre for his allocation. He intended to take the carcasses with him. This was less than 24 hours after the slaughter of the second sheep.

AND THERE'S Nothing Like Vinegar!

A LITTLE VINEGAR mixed with paraffin and added to the warm water with which you wash your white paint will save you labour and time. A final rub with a leather will make it glossy.

A LITTLE VINEGAR will make a splendid "bath" for your meat; rinse thoroughly in cold water after a short time, and you will be surprised how tender it is when cooked.

A LITTLE VINEGAR added to three parts water will brighten up the colours on your faded carpet if you scrub it with a stiff brush after having covered it with salt, and swept in the usual manner.

A LITTLE VINEGAR added to washing-up water will act like magic on greasy dishes.

A LITTLE VINEGAR will cure you of hiccoughs if sprinkled over a lump of sugar (or spoonful of soft sugar) and sucked slowly. A. H.

BUBWITH BRIDE FOR SEATON ROSS FARMER

ALL SAINTS' CHURCH, Bubwith, was crowded when the wedding took place on Monday of Miss Annie Laverack, daughter of Mr and Mrs Arthur Laverack, Greenwood House, Bubwith, and Mr Robert Preston, son of Mr and Mrs H. Preston, Sunnyside, Seaton Ross.

The Rev A. B. Jones conducted the service, and Miss Moverley was the organist.

The bride, given away by her father, was attired in a dove-grey wool georgette dress and coatee, and carried a bouquet of red carnations.

HEATHER FOR LUCK

She also wore a spray of white heather, for luck, given to her by her great-aunt, Mrs L. Ward, of Hull.

She was attended by Miss Patricia Laverack, sister of the bride, and Miss Sylvia Gowthorpe, cousin of the bridegroom, who were attired in duck-egg blue tie-silk dresses, while the best man was Mr George Jibson, Holme House. The groomsmen were Mr Ted Laverack and Mr Keith Gowthorpe. The bride was presented with luck tokens by her two young brothers, Keith and Leslie; her nephew and niece, and three little cousins.

The bride is a teacher at North Duffield School, and the leader of Barby Youth Club. She was a teacher at Barby for six years before moving to North Duffield a year ago.

The bridegroom is a farmer at Seaton Ross and a popular member of Holme YFC.

One of the big events in the lives of the old people of Seaton Ross is the annual treat. Funds are raised in the village throughout the year, and no effort is spared to give them a good time.

RADIO TIMES

The East Riding village of Seaton Ross is famous for its windmills and sun two mills, the one above, which stopped working in 1935 and is about 150 years old, is in the better state of preservation, but funds are needed if it is to remain a Yorkshire landmark. The main shaft weighs four-and-a-half tons, and the sails are 30 feet long and six feet wide, a ton each.

Mr. C. Preston, whose family has owned the windmill on the left for 84 years. "The time is rapidly coming when something will have to be done about its preservation," says Mr. Preston. On windy days bits of the sails fly off.

MURTH

Attention is drawn to the provisions and conditions appearing overleaf.

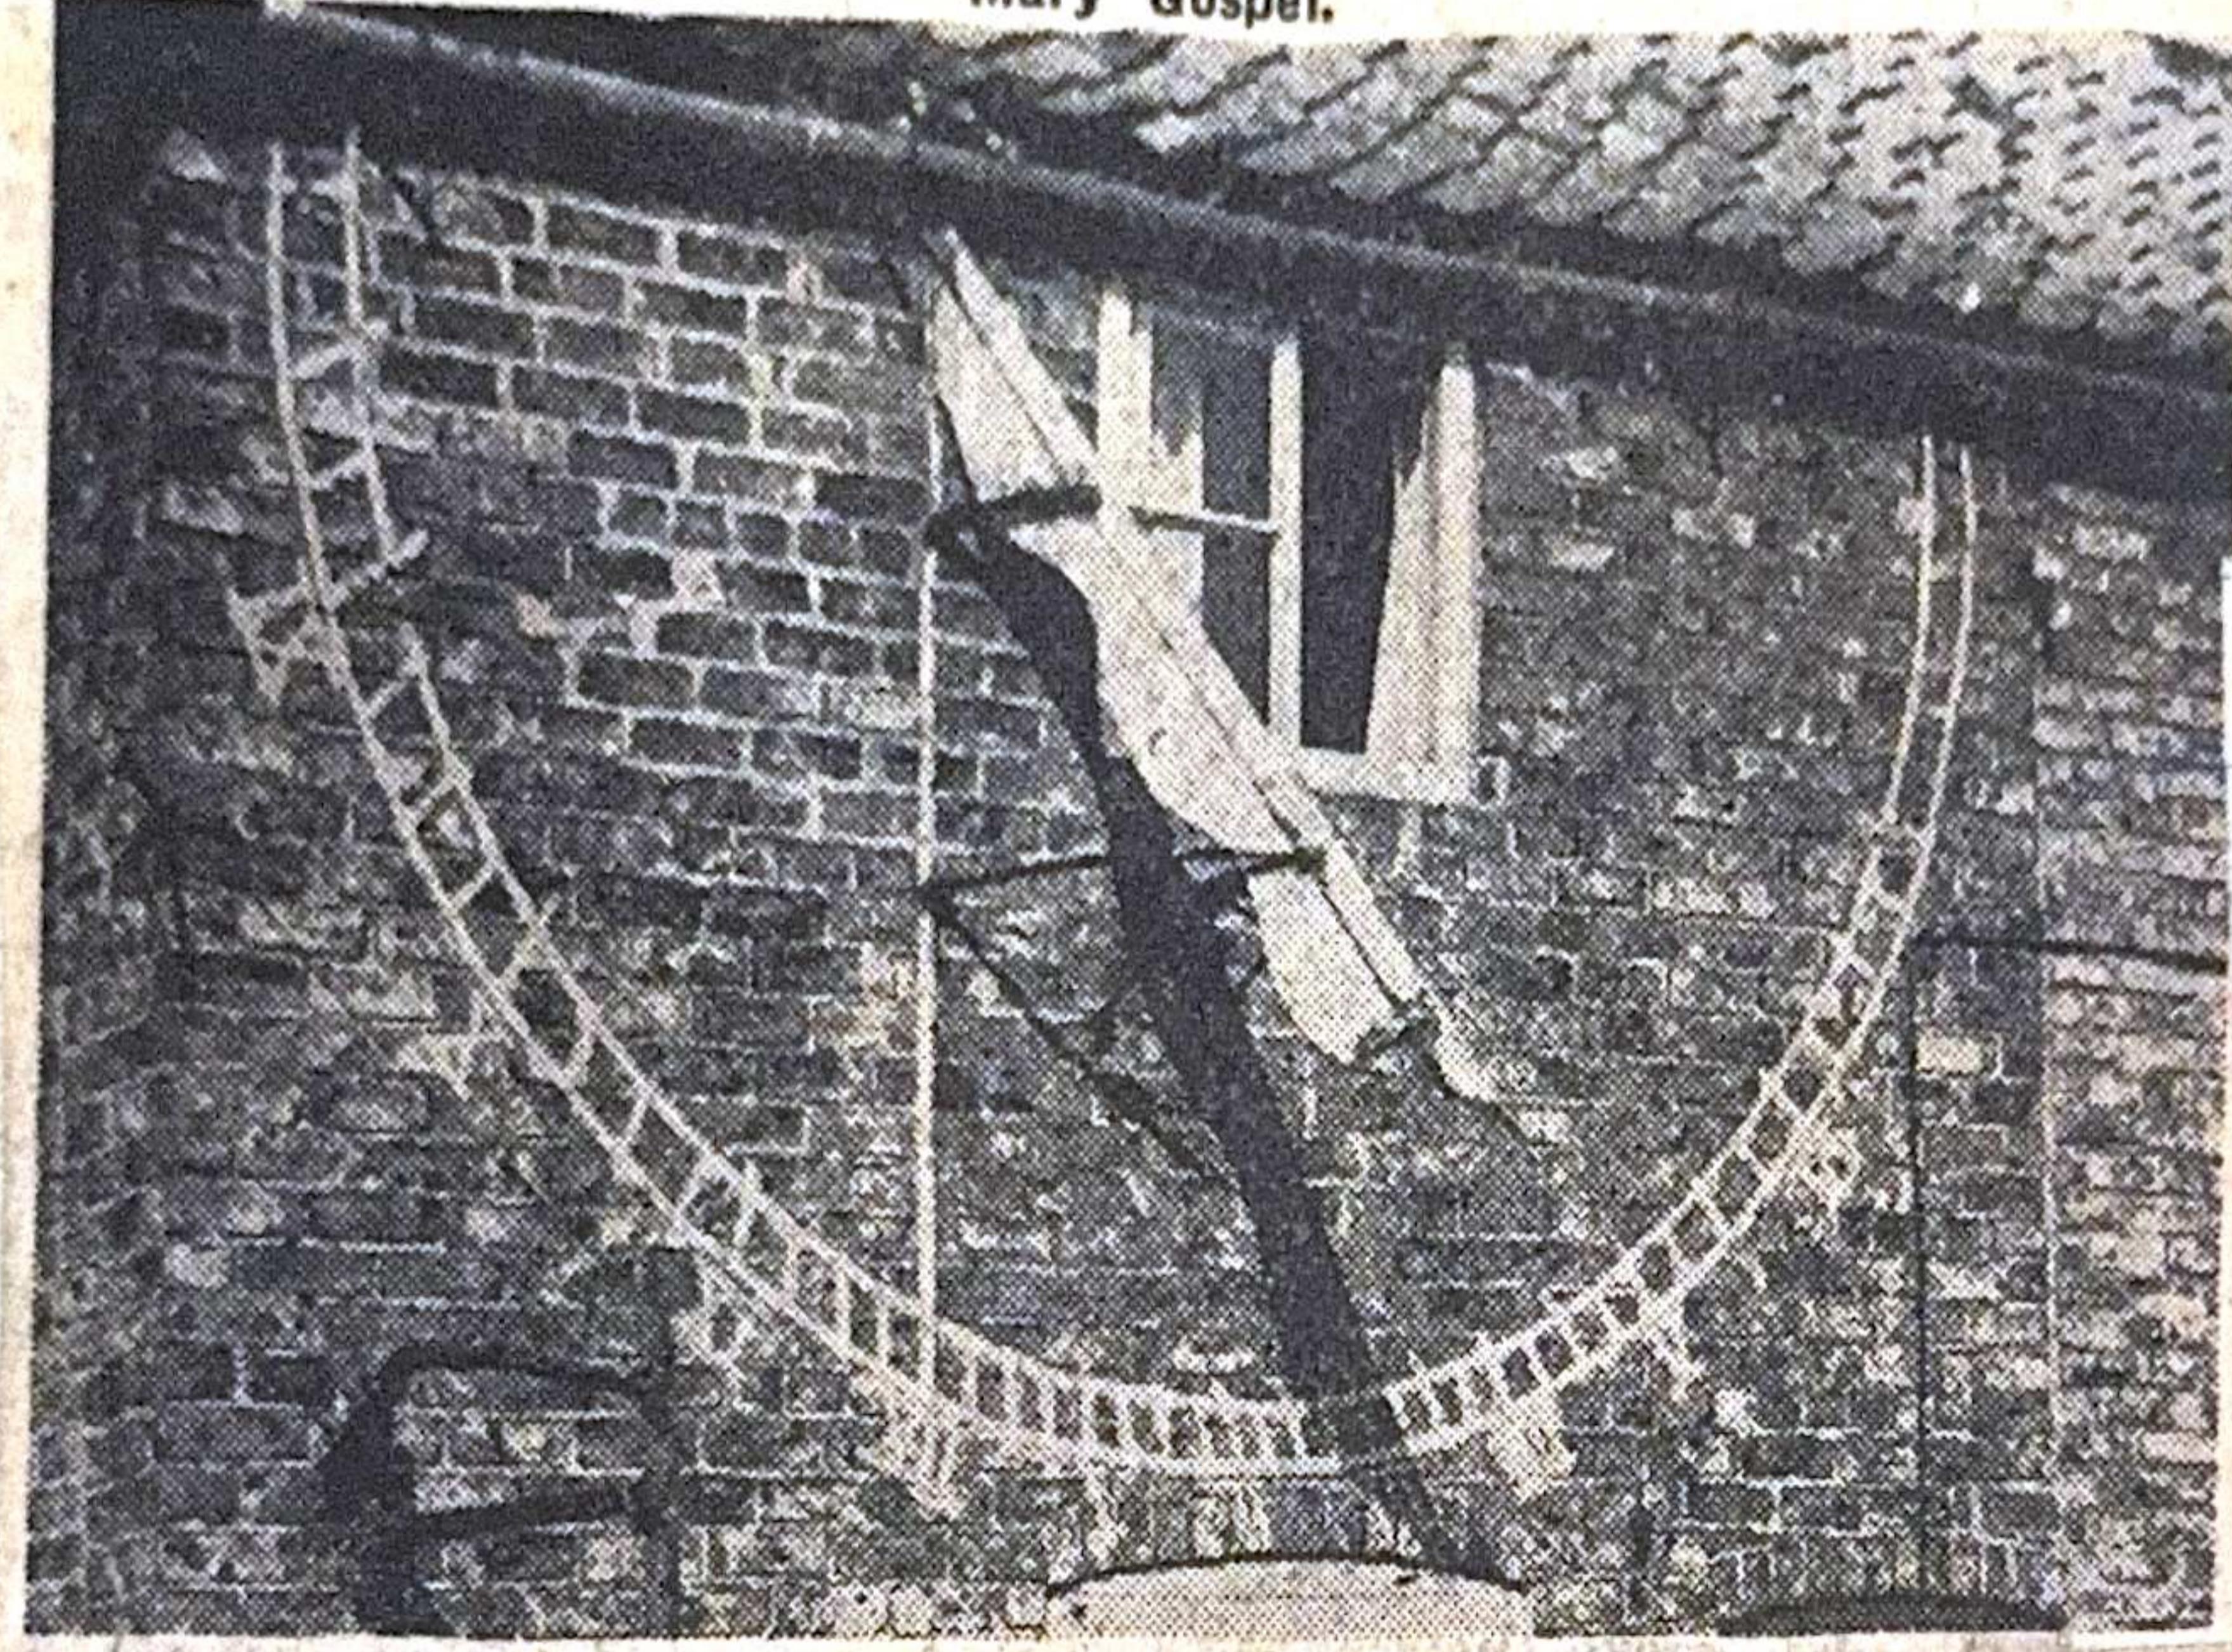

Jubilant "end of rationing" scene at a Leeds filling-station, where two girl employees, Mrs. D. Johnston and Miss Betty Wormald, whose job it has been to record all petrol sales and fill in the endless forms, made a bonfire with the now useless petrol coupons.

William Watson made a lot of sundials at Seaton Ross, including this gigantic affair on the wall of the cottage now occupied by Mrs. Waterworth. The half-circle is 12 feet across and the gnomon (which casts the shadow) more than five feet long.

"L" Driver Fined

Stanley William Johnson, of Bielby, was fined £1 at Pocklington to-day on each of two charges, first with being a provisional driver of a motor-car not having a competent driver, and, second, with failing to display "L" plates.

DEATH OF HON. MRS. D. SEED

The Hon. Mrs. Doris Mary Pottinger Seed, third daughter of the late Lord Knaresborough and wife of Major J. H. A. Seed, died yesterday at her home, Melbourne Hall, near Pocklington.

Mrs. Seed, who during the war was actively engaged in W.V.S. work in the East Riding, was, at the time of her marriage to Major Seed in 1938, the widow of Captain Francis Egerton. Major Seed is a member of the East Riding County Council.

The funeral service will be held at Thornton Church, on Tuesday at 11.30 a.m.

MOOR — BENNETT. — The engagement is announced between C. Moor, Market Weighton, and the late Mr. Bennett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Wilkins, Laytham Grange, Haworth.

The Marriage of Bigamy

THE wedding took place at St. Edmund's Church, Seaton, daughter of Mr. Ross, of Miss Edna Preston, and the late Mrs. Preston, of Seaton. Ross, and Mr. Donald P. Fiddler, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. Fiddler, Marton, Blackpool.

The bride had been at school for 10 years,
at Belby School for 10 years,
Given away by her father, the bride wore a dress of white net over taffeta with plain veill held in position by sprays of pink roses.

She was attended by three small bridesmaids, Misses Cleo Macdougal and Misses Kay and Lynn Marjesson, who wore dressess of white net over pink taffeta with sprigs of forget-me-nots and Dutch-type headdress. They carried baskets of mixed flowers.

Mr. R. Dabbs was the best man. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. T. G. Horwood, Vicar of Seaton Ross, and Mrs. G. Gowthorpe, aunt of the bride, was the organist.

TREAT FOR OLD PEOPLE

WHEN 39 old people had their annual tea and treat at Seaton Ross, the ages of four of them totalled 364 years. They were Mrs. Markham (92), Mr. David Gray (91), Mrs. Chapman (91) and Mr. W. F. Tanfield (90). Ten more who attended were each more than 80.

This was the sixth annual event, which is organised by a committee consisting of: Mr. D. Beck, Mr. C. Preston, Mr. W. Preston, Mr. G. Blackburn, Mr. R. W. Moor, Mr. H. Preston, Mr. G. Gardham, Mrs. G. Blackburn, Mrs. E. Blackburn, Mrs. Baxter, Mrs. C. Preston and Miss D. Hessel.

The funds for its upkeep are raised by donations among the villagers, and by social events.

A good tea was provided, and the guests received sweets, tobacco and cigars. A number of competitions were arranged, with half-crown postal orders as prizes. Later they were entertained by members of the York City Police Concert Party.

Seaton Ross For Longevity

THE village of Seaton Ross has for generations prided itself on the longevity of its inhabitants, but I doubt if the village has ever possessed more long-lived residents than it has at the present time.

This was demonstrated at the Old Folks' Tea and Treat the other day, which was attended by 39 guests, all over 65.

The oldest of them all was 92-year-old Mrs. Markham who, despite her advanced years, still attends to the household duties of Mr. A. Fisher at The Mill.

Then we had lively Mr. David Gray and Mrs. Chapman, both 91, and Mr. Tanfield at 90 made up a grand quartette of nonagenarians.

Ten more of those present were more than 80 and the remainder ranged chiefly around the seventies.

Tea was taken out to two residents who were unable to attend through illness.

This brings the total of old people in the village to more than 40—a remarkably large number for a village the size of Seaton Ross.

The old people were looked after by the members of the committee who organise the event and the splendid meal reflected the generosity of local residents.

I was pleased to renew my acquaintance with so many of the old people and I was particularly pleased to find Mr. David Gray as lively as ever and still full of jokes.
